Movement with Duchamp

Marcel Duchamp was a master at creating the feeling of movement across a painting. This is achieved through the repetition of shapes across the painting.

Pairs of students took turns to strike a pose which they would take while playing a sport and draw the pose. Some students preferred to use mannequins with movable limbs to help them draw. They cut the picture out and used it as a template to make multiple drawings with it. They arranged the pictures to show how they moved while playing the sport of their choice.
