Heather Galler's Landscape painting

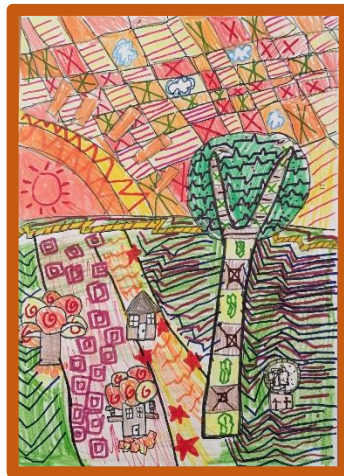

Students learnt that most folk artists do not get formal training in art schools. Instead they usually paint what is important to them. They could be the artists' lives, families or cultures. Middle Years students learnt about Heather Galler's love for landscapes, angels and pets and these are expressed through her folk art pieces. What is unique about her artwork is that she uses lots of patterns and colours. In fact, her paintings are so colourful that she said, 'I love colours to the point when other people are turned off...".
